For me, Jedeye is a software that takes our security up to the next level. When it comes to safety, we want to know that we are doing what we can with the tools that we have. It is very easy to use the touch screen to navigate around your campus cameras. It feels like you are walking through the campus in real time. You can see who is coming and going from a direct angle or zoom out, move the "joy stick" to the area of the camera that you would like to focus on. Some of the other benefits I feel is a certain comfort being able to have the device with me whether I'm at home or on campus. Being able to take it with me or hand it over to another person that will be able to monitor the safety of the campus. If anything Gd forbid would happen, we would be able to track and follow in real time what was going on. We would be able to run to a safe place, direct others to a safe place, communicate where everyone is and where everyone is going. Having the ability to see all the cameras at the same time and in the place where they are mounted in the facility all are making a system we already had, work much safer and practical and beneficial.
